

No. 11-1321

In the Supreme Court of the United States

EDWIN JOSE VELASQUEZ-OTERO, PETITIONER

v.

ERIC H. HOLDER, JR., ATTORNEY GENERAL

*ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE ELEVENTH CIRCUIT*

BRIEF FOR THE RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION

DONALD B. VERRILLI, JR.
Solicitor General Counsel of Record

STUART F. DELERY
*Acting Assistant Attorney
General*

DONALD E. KEENER
CAROL FEDERIGHI
*Attorneys
Department of Justice
Washington, D.C. 20530-0001
SupremeCtBriefs@usdoj.gov
(202) 514-2217*

QUESTION PRESENTED

Whether persons who resist recruitment by gangs in Honduras constitute a “particular social group” under the asylum provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
Opinions below	1
Jurisdiction	1
Statement	1
Argument	8
Conclusion	20

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases:

A-M-E- & J-G-U-, In re , 24 I. & N. Dec. 69 (B.I.A.), aff'd sub nom. Ucelo-Gomez v. Mukasey , 509 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2007)	4, 7, 9, 16, 17
Acosta, In re , 19 I. & N. Dec. 211 (B.I.A. 1985), overruled in part on other grounds by Mogharabi , In re , 19 I. & N. Dec. 439 (B.I.A. 1987)	2, 3, 10, 11
Aguilar-Guerra v. Holder , 343 Fed. Appx. 640 (2d Cir. 2009)	13
Aquino-Rivas v. Attorney Gen. , 431 Fed. Appx. 200 (3d Cir. 2011)	13
Arteaga v. Mukasey , 511 F.3d 940 (9th Cir. 2007)	14
Barrios v. Holder , 581 F.3d 849 (9th Cir. 2009)	12
Benitez Ramos v. Holder , 589 F.3d 426 (7th Cir. 2009)	15, 16, 17, 18
Bueso-Avila v. Holder , 663 F.3d 934 (7th Cir. 2011)	13, 19
C-A-, In re , 23 I. & N. Dec. 951 (B.I.A.), aff'd sub nom. Castillo-Arias v. United States Att'y Gen. , 446 F.3d 1190 (11th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1115 (2007)	4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 16

IV

Cases—Continued:	Page
Castillo-Arias v. United States Att’y Gen. , 446 F.3d 1190 (11th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1115 (2007)	7, 9, 14
Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. NRDC , 467 U.S. 837 (1984)	8
Contreras-Martinez v. Holder , 130 S. Ct. 3274 (2010)	8
Davila-Mejia v. Mukasey , 531 F.3d 624 (8th Cir. 2008)	14
De Vasquez v. United States Att’y Gen. , 345 Fed. Appx. 441 (11th Cir. 2009)	13
E-A-G-, In re , 24 I. & N. Dec. 591 (B.I.A. 2008)	4, 5, 7, 16, 17
Flores v. Mukasey , 297 Fed. Appx. 389 (6th Cir. 2008) . .	13
Fuentes, In re , 19 I. & N. Dec. 658 (B.I.A. 1988)	3
Gaitan v. Holder , 671 F.3d 678 (8th Cir. 2012), petition for cert. pending, No. 11-1525 (filed June 20, 2012)	12
Garcia-Callejas v. Holder , 666 F.3d 828 (1st Cir. 2012)	12
Gatimi v. Holder , 578 F.3d 611 (7th Cir. 2009)	12, 15, 16, 17, 19
H-, In re , 21 I. & N. Dec. 337 (B.I.A. 1996)	3
Henriquez-Rivas v. Holder , 670 F.3d 1033 (9th Cir. 2012)	18
Hernandez-Navarrete v. Holder , 132 S. Ct. 1910 (2012)	8
Holder v. Martinez Gutierrez , 132 S. Ct. 2011 (2012) . .	10
INS v. Aguirre-Aguirre , 526 U.S. 415 (1999)	10, 11
INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca , 480 U.S. 421 (1987)	2, 11

Cases—Continued:	Page
J-B-N- & S-M-, In re , 24 I. & N. Dec. 208 (B.I.A. 2007)	2
Kante v. Holder , 634 F.3d 321 (6th Cir. 2011)	14
Kasinga, In re , 21 I. & N. Dec. 357 (B.I.A. 1996)	3, 17
Larios v. Holder , 608 F.3d 105 (1st Cir. 2010)	12
Lizama v. Holder , 629 F.3d 440 (4th Cir. 2011)	14
Mendez-Barrera v. Holder , 602 F.3d 21 (1st Cir. 2010)	11
Orellana-Monson v. Holder , 685 F.3d 511 (5th Cir. 2012)	12, 14, 15
Ortiz-Puentes v. Holder , 662 F.3d 481 (8th Cir. 2011)	12
Pierre v. Holder , 132 S. Ct. 2771 (2012)	8
Portillo v. United States Att’y Gen. , 435 Fed. Appx. 844 (11th Cir. 2011)	13
Ramos-Lopez v. Holder , 563 F.3d 855 (9th Cir. 2009)	12
Rivera-Barrientos v. Holder , 666 F.3d 641 (10th Cir. 2012)	12, 14
S-E-G-, In re , 24 I. & N. Dec. 579 (B.I.A. 2008)	passim
Sanchez & Escobar, In re , 19 I. & N. Dec. 276 (B.I.A. 1985), affirmed sub nom. Sanchez-Trujillo v. INS , 801 F.2d 1571 (9th Cir. 1986)	19
Scatambuli v. Holder , 558 F.3d 53 (1st Cir. 2009)	14
Toboso-Alfonso, In re , 20 I. & N. Dec. 819 (B.I.A. 1990)	3
Turcios-Avila v. United States Att’y Gen. , 362 Fed. Appx. 37 (11th Cir. 2010)	13
Ucelo-Gomez v. Mukasey , 509 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2007)	14

VI

Cases—Continued:	Page
V-T-S-, In re , 21 I. & N. Dec. 792 (B.I.A. 1997)	3
Valdiviezo-Galdamez v. Attorney Gen. , 663 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2011)	13, 15, 16
Zavaleta-Lopez v. Attorney Gen. , 360 Fed. Appx. 331 (3d Cir. 2010)	13
Zelaya v. Holder , 668 F.3d 159 (4th Cir. 2012)	12, 14
Statutes and regulation:
Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1101 et seq. . . .	1
8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(42)(A)	2
8 U.S.C. 1158(b)(1)(A)	2
8 U.S.C. 1158(b)(1)(B)(i)	2
8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(6)(A)(i)	5
8 U.S.C. 1231(b)(3)(A)	2
8 C.F.R.:
Section 208.13(a)	2
Section 1208.13(a)	2
Section 1208.13(b)(1)(iii)(B)	6

In the Supreme Court of the United States

No. 11-1321

EDWIN JOSE VELASQUEZ-OTERO, PETITIONER

v.

ERIC H. HOLDER, JR., ATTORNEY GENERAL

*ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE ELEVENTH CIRCUIT*

BRIEF FOR THE RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the court of appeals (Pet. App. 1a-9a) is unreported but is available at 456 Fed. Appx. 822. The decisions of the Board of Immigration Appeals (Pet. App. 10a-12a) and the immigration judge (Pet. App. 13a-25a) are also unreported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on February 1, 2012. The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed on May 1, 2012. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

STATEMENT

1. The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), 8 U.S.C. 1101 et seq., provides that the Secretary of Homeland Security or the Attorney General may grant asylum to an alien who demonstrates that he is a “refugee.” 8 U.S.C. 1158(b)(1)(A). The INA defines a “refugee” as an alien “who is unable or unwilling to return to” his country of origin “because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion.” 8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(42)(A). The burden is on the alien to show that he qualifies as a refugee. 8 C.F.R. 208.13(a), 1208.13(a). An alien must show that one of the enumerated grounds is “at least one central reason” for his persecution. 8 U.S.C. 1158(b)(1)(B)(i); see In re J-B-N- & S-M-, 24 I. & N. Dec. 208, 212 (B.I.A. 2007).¹

The INA does not further define “particular social group.” In 1985, the Board of Immigration Appeals (Board) described that phrase as referring to a “group of persons all of whom share a common, immutable characteristic” that “the members of the group either cannot change, or should not be required to change because it is fundamental to their individual identities or consciences.” In re Acosta, 19 I. & N. Dec. 211, 233 (1985), overruled in part on other grounds by In re Mogharrabi, 19 I. & N. Dec. 439 (1987). The Board suggested that the shared characteristic “might be an innate one such as sex, color, or kinship ties, or in some circumstances it might be a shared past experience such as former military leadership or land ownership.” Ibid. The Board emphasized, however, that whether a proposed group qualifies “remains to be determined on a case-by-case basis.” Ibid.

¹ Similar to asylum, the provision of the INA addressing withholding of removal requires a showing that the alien’s “life or freedom would be threatened” in the country of removal because of “the alien’s race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion.” 8 U.S.C. 1231(b)(3)(A). The source and meaning of these five grounds are the same under the asylum and withholding-of-removal provisions. See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421, 440-441 (1987).

Between 1985 and 1997, the Board’s precedential decisions identified four “particular social groups”: persons identified as homosexuals by the Cuban government;² members of the Marehan subclan of the Darood clan in Somalia;³ “young women of the Tchamba-Kunsuntu Tribe [of northern Togo] who have not had [female genital mutilation (FGM)], as practiced by that tribe, and who oppose the practice”;⁴ and Filipinos of mixed Filipino and Chinese ancestry.⁵ The Board also suggested that, “in appropriate circumstances,” an alien could establish a valid asylum claim based on persecution as a “former member of the national police” of El Salvador.⁶ Some of those decisions relied not only on an immutable/fundamental group characteristic, but also on whether the group is generally recognizable in the pertinent society. See In re V-T-S-, 21 I. & N. Dec. 792, 798 (B.I.A. 1997) (relying on evidence that a percentage of the population had “an identifiable Chinese background” (citation omitted)); In re H-, 21 I. & N. Dec. 337, 342-343 (B.I.A. 1996) (reasoning that “clan membership is a highly recognizable, immutable characteristic” and that clan members were “identifiable as a group based upon linguistic commonalities”).

Between 2006 and 2008, in response to the evolving nature of claims presented by aliens seeking asylum and ² In re Toboso-Alfonso, 20 I. & N. Dec. 819, 821-823 (B.I.A. 1990).

³ In re H-, 21 I. & N. Dec. 337, 342-343 (B.I.A. 1996).

⁴ In re Kasinga, 21 I. & N. Dec. 357, 365 (B.I.A. 1996).

⁵ In re V-T-S-, 21 I. & N. Dec. 792, 798 (B.I.A. 1997).

⁶ In re Fuentes, 19 I. & N. Dec. 658, 662-663 (B.I.A. 1988).

developing case law in the courts of appeals, the Board issued four precedential decisions that were designed to provide “greater specificity” in defining the phrase “particular social group.” In re S-E-G-, 24 I. & N. Dec. 579, 582 (B.I.A. 2008). Those decisions restated the immutable/fundamental characteristic requirement. See In re A-M-E- & J-G-U-, 24 I. & N. Dec. 69, 73-74 (B.I.A.), aff’d sub nom. Ucelo-Gomez v. Mukasey, 509 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2007) (per curiam); In re C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. 951, 956 (B.I.A.), aff’d sub nom. Castillo-Arias v. United States Att’y Gen., 446 F.3d 1190 (11th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1115 (2007). They also “re-affirmed” (A-M-E- & J-G-U-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 74) that, consistent with the Board’s previous decisions, an important factor is whether the proposed social group possesses a recognized level of “social visibility,” which describes “the extent to which members of a society perceive those with the characteristic in question as members of a social group.” In re E-A-G-, 24 I. & N. Dec. 591, 594 (B.I.A. 2008). The Board explained that this approach was consistent with its prior decisions, which had considered the “recognizability” of a proposed group. C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. at 959.

The Board’s recent decisions also explained that the analysis of “particular social group” claims involves consideration of whether the group in question is defined with sufficient “particularity.” A-M-E- & J-G-U-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 74, 76; C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. at 957. The proposed group must be sufficiently defined to “provide an adequate benchmark for determining group membership.” A-M-E- & J-G-U-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 76; see ibid. (stating that “[t]he terms ‘wealthy’ and ‘affluent’ standing alone are too amorphous to provide an adequate benchmark for determining group membership”). The Board further stated that it will consider whether the proposed group “share[s] a common characteristic other than their risk of being persecuted,” or instead is “defined exclusively by the fact that [the group] is targeted for persecution.” C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. at 956, 960 (citation omitted); see id. at 957 (finding group of “noncriminal informants” “too loosely defined to meet the requirement of particularity”).

In the two most recent of its precedential decisions, the Board applied the above considerations in addressing, and rejecting, claims of asylum based on resistance to gang recruitment. In S-E-G-, the Board rejected a proposed social group of “Salvadoran youth who have been subjected to recruitment efforts by [MS-13 (the Mara Salvatrucha gang)] and who have rejected or resisted membership in the gang based on their own personal, moral, and religious opposition to the gang’s values and activities.” 24 I. & N. Dec. at 581, 588. And in E-A-G-, the Board rejected a proposed social group of young “persons resistant to gang membership” in Honduras. 24 I. & N. Dec. at 593.

2. Petitioner is a native and citizen of Honduras who entered the United States without authorization in 2006. Pet. App. 2a. He was apprehended shortly thereafter and placed in removal proceedings. Id. at 2a, 14a. Petitioner admitted the factual allegations in the Notice to Appear and conceded that he was removable under 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(6)(A)(i) as an alien present in the United States without being admitted or paroled. Pet. App. 2a. Petitioner applied for asylum, withholding of removal, and protection under the federal regulations implementing the Convention Against Torture (CAT). Ibid. As the basis for these forms of relief, petitioner claimed that he had been harmed in Honduras by gang members seeking to recruit him, whose entreaties he had resisted. Id. at 19a-21a. Petitioner further claimed that he would be subject to future harm if he returned to Honduras because he no longer had any family members there and accordingly would be homeless and without protection. See id. at 19a-21a, 22a-23a.

The immigration judge (IJ) granted petitioner's application for asylum. Pet. App. 13a-25a. The IJ found that petitioner had credibly established "that there ha[ve] been in fact beatings by members of gangs who wanted to recruit him * * * which he opposed." Id. at 24a. The IJ further found that, on petitioner's return, he would be targeted by gang members because "he may be perceived [as] returning from the United States with money or resources," and that he would be a particularly vulnerable target because he would be homeless and without family. Id. at 22a-23a. Accordingly, the IJ determined that petitioner merited asylum under 8 C.F.R. 1208.13(b)(1)(iii)(B) because there was a reasonable possibility that, on his return, he would be subject to "other serious harm." Pet. App. 22a-23a; Administrative Record (A.R.) 129-135. The IJ further concluded that petitioner had established a well-founded fear of future persecution in Honduras as a member of a "particular social group" of individuals perceived as wealthy because they are returning from the United States. Pet. App. 24a.⁷

The Board vacated the IJ's decision and ordered petitioner removed to Honduras. Pet. App. 10a-12a. The Board explained that its prior precedents established that individuals who resisted attempts at gang recruitment "are not members of a particular social group for asylum purposes.” Id. at 11a-12a (citing S-E-G-, supra, and E-A-G-, supra). The Board further held that being “perceived as wealthy upon return from the United States” was not a basis for asylum. Id. at 12a (citing A-M-E- & J-G-U-, supra). The Board explained that petitioner’s “lack of family members remaining in Honduras is irrelevant to whether he belongs to a particular social group.” Ibid.

⁷ Because the grant of asylum rendered further relief unnecessary, the IJ did not rule on petitioner's alternative requests for withholding of removal or CAT protection. Pet. App. 24a-25a.

3. The court of appeals denied a petition for review in an unpublished, per curiam opinion. Pet. App. 1a-9a. The court stated that because Congress did not define “particular social group,” it would defer to the Board’s interpretation of that statutory requirement unless the Board’s interpretation is unreasonable. Id. at 4a-5a (citing Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. NRDC, 467 U.S. 837 (1984)). The court explained that the “particular social group” category “is not a catch-all for people who allege persecution but do not fit into other protected groups,” and that “[s]ocial groups must have sufficient social visibility to be entitled to protection.” Id. at 6a (citing Castillo-Arias v. United States Att’y Gen., 446 F.3d 1190, 1198 (11th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1115 (2007)). The court further explained that the Board had previously declined to recognize social groups similar to the group petitioner claimed. Ibid. (citing E-A-G-, supra, S-E-G-, supra, and A-M-E- & J-G-U-, supra). The court thus concluded that the Board’s decision was reasonable. Id. at 7a.⁸

⁸ When the Board vacated the IJ’s decision granting asylum to petitioner, it did not consider whether petitioner’s case should be remanded for consideration of his withholding-of-removal and CAT claims. Pet. App. 10a-12a. The court of appeals rejected petitioner’s argument that that omission by the Board was a violation of due process, id. at 7a-9a, and petitioner does not renew that argument in his certiorari petition.

ARGUMENT

Petitioner seeks further review (Pet. 15-40) of the court of appeals' conclusion that he failed to demonstrate membership in a "particular social group" for purposes of the INA's asylum provisions. The unpublished, non-precedential decision of the court of appeals is correct, and it does not conflict with any decision of another court of appeals. In addition, to the extent that there is disagreement among the circuits about the validity of the Board's general approach to assessing "particular social group" claims, that disagreement is limited to the clarity of the Board's reasoning rather than error in the standard, it is still developing, and it leans heavily in favor of the government's position. In any event, this case would be a poor vehicle for further review of the question presented, because petitioner has not demonstrated that he would be persecuted on account of a "particular social group" even without consideration of "social visibility."

The Court has recently denied review in other cases seeking review of the Board's reliance on social visibility to define a "particular social group." See Pierre v. Holder, 132 S. Ct. 2771 (2012) (No. 11-8335) (claimed particular social group of security guards employed by the United States Embassy in Haiti); Hernandez-Navarrete v. Holder, 132 S. Ct. 1910 (2012) (No. 11-8255) (claimed membership in a particular social group of "young Salvadoran men who refuse to join gangs"); Contreras-Martinez v. Holder, 130 S. Ct. 3274 (2010) (No. 09-830) (claimed membership in a particular social group of "adolescents in El Salvador who refuse to join the gangs of that country because of their opposition to the gangs' violent and criminal activities").⁹ The same result is appropriate here.

1. The court of appeals' decision is correct. As explained above, in exercising its authority to interpret the INA, the Board has, through a series of decisions, developed and refined its interpretation of the term "particular social group." Based upon its experience and the types of social group claims it has reviewed, the Board has determined that a "particular social group" generally is a group of persons: (1) sharing a common, immutable characteristic that members of the group either cannot change, or should not be required to change because it is fundamental to their individual identities or consciences; (2) whose members are perceived as a group by the relevant society due to the shared characteristics; (3) that is sufficiently defined to provide an adequate benchmark for delineating the group; and (4) that is not defined exclusively by the fact that its members have been targeted for persecution. See In re A-M-E- & J-G-U-, 24 I. & N. Dec. 69, 74, 76 (B.I.A. 2007), aff'd sub nom. Ucelo-Gomez v. Mukasey, 509 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2007) (per curiam); In re C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. 951, 957, 960 (B.I.A.), aff'd sub nom. Castillo-Arias v. United States Att'y Gen., 446 F.3d 1990 (11th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1115 (2007); see also pp. 2-5, supra.

Because the INA does not define the term "particular social group," see Pet. 7 (acknowledging that the term is "undefined by federal law"), the Board's interpretation of that term is entitled to deference so long as it is a “fair and permissible” reading of the statute. INS v. Aguirre-Aguirre, 526 U.S. 415, 428 (1999); see Chevron USA Inc. v. NRDC, 467 U.S. 837, 842-845 (1984); see also Holder v. Martinez Gutierrez, 132 S. Ct 2011, 2017 (2012) (explaining that under Chevron, the Board’s “position prevails if it is a reasonable construction of the statute, whether or not it is the only possible interpretation or even the one a court might think best”). As relevant here, the Board has reasonably concluded that social visibility is a relevant criterion in deciding whether to recognize a proposed social group. The Board explained that the “particularity” and “social visibility” criteria are designed to “give greater specificity to the definition of a social group,” which was initially defined as “a group whose members ‘share a common, immutable characteristic . . . that [the] members of the group either cannot change, or should not be required to change because it is fundamental to their individual identities or consciences.’” In re S-E-G-, 24 I. & N. Dec. 579, 582-583 (B.I.A. 2008) (quoting In re Acosta, 19 I. & N. Dec. 211, 233 (B.I.A. 1985), overruled in part on other grounds by In re Mogharrabi, 19 I. & N. Dec. 439 (B.I.A. 1987)). The Board further explained that the phrase “particular social group” should be construed such “that the shared characteristic of the group should generally be recognizable by others in the community.” S-E-G-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 586-587; see C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. at 959-960. The Board also relied on guidelines adopted by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), which “confirm that ‘visibility’ is an important element in identifying the existence of a particular social group.” Id. at 960.¹⁰ The Board’s consideration of social visibility in assessing an alien’s claim of membership in a particular social group is therefore reasonable.

⁹ A similar question is presented in the pending petition in Gaitan v. Holder, petition for cert. pending, No. 11-1525 (filed June 20, 2012) (claimed particular social group of Salvadorans who have been recruited by, and have refused to join, MS-13 based on opposition to gang membership).

2. The Board has long been of the view that whether a proposed group qualifies as a “particular social group” must “be determined on a case-by-case basis.” C-A-, 23 I. & N. Dec. at 955 (quoting Acosta, 19 I. & N. Dec. at 233); cf. INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421, 448 (1987) (stating that “[t]here is obviously some ambiguity in a term like ‘well-founded fear,’” which is used in the INA provisions governing asylum and “can only be given concrete meaning through a process of case-by-case adjudication”).

No court of appeals has held that people who refuse to join a gang constitute a “particular social group” under the INA. The circuits that have directly addressed that question in published opinions have all reached the same conclusion as the Eleventh Circuit reached in its unpublished decision in this case. See Mendez-Barrera

¹⁰ Petitioner (Pet. 9-10, 31-33) and his amicus (Br. of Amicus Curiae Kids In Need Of Defense 8-10 (Amicus Br.)) contend that the Board’s decision is unreasonable because the UNHCR’s guidelines adopted a disjunctive test in which groups that either have an immutable characteristic or are socially visible constitute a “particular social group.” There is no requirement that the Board, which has interpretive authority over the INA, must follow the broadest interpretation of UNHCR guidelines—especially UNHCR guidelines, like those here (see Pet. 8), that were adopted long after enactment in 1980 of the asylum provisions of the INA—for its interpretation of the INA to be reasonable. This Court has recognized that documents like the UNHCR’s guidelines may be “useful interpretive aid[s],” but they are “not binding on the Attorney General or United States courts.” Aguirre-Aguirre, 526 U.S. at 427. The Board’s interpretation is binding if it is a “permissible construction of the statute.” Id. at 424.

v. Holder, 602 F.3d 21, 26-27 (1st Cir. 2010) (young women recruited by gang members who resist such recruitment in El Salvador);¹¹ Zelaya v. Holder, 668 F.3d 159, 167 (4th Cir. 2012) (young Honduran males who refuse to join MS-13, have notified the police of MS-13's harassment tactics, and have an identifiable tormentor within the gang); Orellana-Monson v. Holder, 685 F.3d 511, 516 (5th Cir. 2012) ("Salvadoran males, ages 8 to 15, who have been recruited by Mara 18 but have refused to join due to a principled opposition to gangs"); Gaitan v. Holder, 671 F.3d 678, 682 (8th Cir. 2012) (young males who previously have been recruited by MS-13 in El Salvador and are opposed to the nature of gangs);¹² Ramos-Lopez v. Holder, 563 F.3d 855, 858 (9th Cir. 2009) (young Honduran men who have been recruited by MS-13, but who refuse to join);¹³ Rivera-Barrientos v. Holder, 666 F.3d 641, 647 (10th Cir. 2012) (El Salvadoran women between ages of 12 and 25 who resisted gang recruitment).

In dicta, the Seventh Circuit has noted that resistance to gang recruitment is not a protected ground for asylum. See Gatimi v. Holder, 578 F.3d 611, 616 (2009) (observing that it has "no quarrel with" the view that "young Honduran men who resist being recruited into gangs” do not constitute a “particular social group”) (citing Ramos-Lopez, 563 F.3d at 859-861); Bueso-Avila v. Holder, 663 F.3d 934, 938 (7th Cir. 2011) (observing that gang members “may have threatened and attacked [petitioner] in an attempt to recruit him into the gang because he was one of several local youths who were potential recruits—which is not a protected basis under the Act”). And the Third Circuit in Valdiviezo-Galdamez v. Attorney General, 663 F.3d 582 (2011), rendered no holding either way regarding the validity of a social group of Honduran youth who refused recruitment by gangs, but instead remanded to the Board questioning its explanation for its standards for defining a “particular social group.” Id. at 608-609. There is thus no conflict in the circuits with respect to the specific question in this case of whether resistance to gang membership is a ground for asylum.¹⁴

¹¹ See also Garcia-Callejas v. Holder, 666 F.3d 828, 830 (1st Cir. 2012) (per curiam) (young male targets of gang recruitment); Larios v. Holder, 608 F.3d 105, 108-109 (1st Cir. 2010) (young Guatemalan men recruited by gang members who resist such recruitment).

¹² See also Ortiz-Puentes v. Holder, 662 F.3d 481, 483 (8th Cir. 2011) (young Guatemalans who refused to join gangs and were harmed as a result).

¹³ See also Barrios v. Holder, 581 F.3d 849, 854-856 (9th Cir. 2009) (young males in Guatemala who are targeted for gang recruitment but refuse because they disagree with the gang's criminal activities).

¹⁴ In addition to the Eleventh Circuit (in this and earlier cases), three other circuits, including the Third Circuit prior to Valdiviezo, have, in unpublished decisions, rejected similar claims. Cf. Aguilar-Guerra v. Holder, 343 Fed. Appx. 640 (2d Cir. 2009) (young Salvadoran men actively pressured to join gangs and who refused to do so); Aquino-Rivas v. Attorney Gen., 431 Fed. Appx. 200 (3d Cir. 2011) (per curiam) (Salvadoran teenage boys who refuse to join gangs); Zavaleta-Lopez v. Attorney Gen., 360 Fed. Appx. 331 (3d Cir. 2010) (per curiam) (young men who have been targeted by gangs for membership and who have refused to join gangs); Flores v. Mukasey, 297 Fed. Appx. 389 (6th Cir. 2008) (young men who are targeted for conscription into Salvadoran gangs); Portillo v. United States Att’y Gen., 435 Fed. Appx. 844, 846 (11th Cir. 2011) (per curiam) (former Salvadoran military veterans facing persecution by gangs); Turcios-Avila v. United States Att’y Gen., 362 Fed. Appx. 37 (11th Cir. 2010) (per curiam) (young Honduran men who refuse to join gangs); De Vasquez v. United States Att’y Gen., 345 Fed. Appx. 441, 445-447 (11th Cir. 2009) (per curiam) (“poor girls who come from fatherless homes, with no adult male protective

3. Petitioner contends (Pet. 16-27) that there is disagreement in the circuits regarding whether it is permissible for the Board to consider social visibility in evaluating “particular social group” claims. To the extent there is disagreement among the circuits regarding the permissible methodology for evaluating “particular social group” claims, that conflict is lopsided and may resolve itself as the Board refines and shapes the “particular social group” definition.

The court of appeals in this case relied in part on the Board’s precedential decision in S-E-G-, which explains that “membership in a purported social group requires that the group have particular and well-defined boundaries, and that it possess a recognized level of social visibility.” 24 I. & N. Dec. at 582; see Pet. App. 6a. Altogether, nine circuits have, in published opinions, deferred to S-E-G-, or accepted parts of the methodology employed by the Board in S-E-G- without addressing other parts. See Scatambuli v. Holder, 558 F.3d 53, 59-60 (1st Cir. 2009); Ucelo-Gomez v. Mukasey, 509 F.3d 70, 73 (2d Cir. 2007) (per curiam); Zelaya, 668 F.3d at 164-167;¹⁵ Orellana-Monson, 685 F.3d at 519-522; Kante v. Holder, 634 F.3d 321, 327 (6th Cir. 2011); Davila-Mejia v. Mukasey, 531 F.3d 624, 629 (8th Cir. 2008); Arteaga v. Mukasey, 511 F.3d 940, 945 (9th Cir. 2007); Rivera-Barrientos, 666 F.3d at 650; Castillo-Arias, 446 F.3d at 1197.

figures . . . who resist recruitment or criticize [a criminal gang in El Salvador called] the Maras”) (citation omitted).

¹⁵ Although the Fourth Circuit has repeatedly deferred to the Board’s social group reasoning, see Zelaya, 668 F.3d at 164-167 (citing cases), it is not clear that the court has addressed the “social visibility” criterion. See Lizama v. Holder, 629 F.3d 440, 447 n.4 (2011).

Petitioner is correct that two Seventh Circuit decisions have criticized the Board’s “social visibility” criterion, and the Third Circuit recently reversed the deference it had previously extended to the Board’s social group reasoning. See Pet. 21-25 (discussing Gatimi, supra; Benitez Ramos v. Holder, 589 F.3d 426 (7th Cir. 2009); and Valdiviezo-Galdamez, supra). In each of those cases, the court did not reject the validity of the Board’s criterion, but rather ruled that the Board’s explanation of its criterion was insufficient or insufficiently clear, and remanded the case to the Board for further proceedings. See Gatimi, 578 F.3d at 616 (noting that the court cannot understand “what work ‘social visibility’ does”); Benitez Ramos, 589 F.3d at 430 (describing the agency’s application of “social visibility” as “unclear”); Valdiviezo-Galdamez, 663 F.3d at 606-607 (having a “hard time understanding” the explanation offered for “social visibility” and why the requirement is not inconsistent with prior precedent). The Board will have the opportunity to provide further explanation in response to those decisions. It would be premature for this Court to consider the application of the term “particular social group” in this regard before the Board has done so and before the courts of appeals have had an opportunity to consider the Board’s further elaboration.

Contrary to the suggestions of petitioner and his amicus that the Board’s “social visibility” requirement was a sudden and unexplained change (Pet. 28-31; Amicus Br. 6-8), such an explanation is furnished by reference to pre-existing Board precedent that addresses those courts’ concerns. See Orellana-Monson, 685 F.3d at 521 (“[T]he BIA’s current particularity and social visibility test is not a radical departure from prior interpretation, but rather a subtle shift that evolved out of the BIA’s prior decisions on similar cases and is a reasoned interpretation, which is therefore entitled to deference.”). First, the Seventh Circuit stated in Gatimi that the Board has not “attempted, in this or any other case, to explain the reasoning behind the criterion of social visibility” and that the Board “has been inconsistent rather than silent” because it has not “repudiat[ed]” earlier decisions that recognized particular social groups without referring to social visibility. 578 F.3d at 615-616; see also Valdiviezo-Galdamez, 663 F.3d at 606-607. But the Seventh Circuit in Gatimi did not discuss the Board’s 2006 precedential decision in C-A-, which explained that the Board’s previous “decisions involving social groups have considered the recognizability, i.e., the social visibility, of the group in question,” and that the “particular social group[s]” previously recognized by the Board “involved characteristics that were highly visible and recognizable by others in the country in question.” 23 I. & N. Dec. at 959-960. Gatimi likewise did not discuss the Board’s 2007 precedential decision in A-M-E- & J-G-U-, which described C-A- as having “reaffirm[ed] the requirement that the shared characteristic of the group should generally be recognizable by others in the community,” 24 I. & N. Dec. at 74, or the Board’s more recent 2008 precedential decision in S-E-G-, which contained a detailed discussion of the Board’s views regarding social visibility and particularity. See pp. 4-5, supra (discussing S-E-G-, supra and the Board’s companion decision in E-A-G-, supra).

Second, Gatimi and Benitez Ramos assumed that the Board views its “social visibility” criterion as requiring that members of a particular social group must literally be visible to the naked eye. See Benitez Ramos, 589 F.3d at 430 (describing the Board’s view as being “that you can be a member of a particular social group only if a complete stranger could identify you as a member if he encountered you in the street”); Gatimi, 578 F.3d at 616 (“The only way, on the Board’s view, that the Mungiki defectors can qualify as members of a particular social group is by pinning a target to their backs with the legend ‘I am a Mungiki defector.’”). Although it appears that the government’s briefs and oral argument in those cases may have contributed to the confusion, see Benitez Ramos, 589 F.3d at 430; Gatimi, 578 F.3d at 616, that narrow interpretation is not required by the Board’s precedential decisions.

In E-A-G-, the Board defined “social visibility” as “the extent to which members of a society perceive those with the characteristic in question as members of a social group.” 24 I. & N. Dec. at 594. Consistent with that statement, the Board’s precedential decisions generally have equated “social visibility” with the extent to which the group “would be ‘perceived as a group’ by society,” rather than the ease with which one may necessarily be able to identify by sight particular individuals as having a particular characteristic shared by members of that group. S-E-G-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 586-588 (discussing “general societal perception” and finding little evidence that Salvadoran youth who resist gang recruitment “would be ‘perceived as a group’ by society”); see A-M-E- & J-G-U-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 75 (finding no evidence “that the general societal perception would be” that the affluent in Guatemala would be more exposed to violence and crime than other segments of society). The historical development of the Board’s interpretation of “particular social group” reflects this distinction. Before S-E-G-, the Board recognized as a “particular social group” women who had not yet been subjected to FGM and who opposed the practice, In re Kasinga, 21 I. & N. Dec. 357, 365-366 (B.I.A. 1996), two characteristics that also are not necessarily outwardly visible. In Benitez Ramos, the Seventh Circuit recognized that “social visibility,” when properly understood as not necessarily requiring literal visibility, may be a legitimate basis for defining a particular social group. See 589 F.3d at 430 (“If society recognizes a set of people having certain common characteristics as a group, this is an indication that being in the set might expose one to special treatment, whether friendly or unfriendly.”).

Furthermore, the Ninth Circuit recently granted en banc rehearing in a particular social group case to determine, inter alia, whether the Board’s “social visibility” and “particularity” standards are entitled to deference. See Henriquez-Rivas v. Holder, 670 F.3d 1033 (2012) (whether people testifying against or otherwise opposing gang members is a cognizable particular social group). In addition, as explained above (n.15, supra), the Fourth Circuit may or may not have accepted the Board’s social visibility reasoning yet. Accordingly, quite aside from the absence of a circuit conflict on the specific question whether resistance to recruitment for gang membership is a basis for asylum (see pp. 11-13, supra), because administrative and lower court decisions may further refine the social group criteria, issues concerning those criteria are not ripe for certiorari review.

4. In any event, this case would be a poor vehicle for further review of the social visibility factor, because petitioner’s proposed social group—one based on resistance to gang recruitment—would not fit within the “particular social group” category even without considerations of social visibility. Both the Board and the courts have expressed doubts that a social group can “be defined exclusively by the fact that its members have been subjected to harm in the past (i.e., forced gang recruitment and any violence associated with that recruitment).” S-E-G-, 24 I. & N. Dec. at 584; see Gatimi, 578 F.3d at 616 (“The Board has a legitimate interest in resisting efforts to classify people who are targets of persecution as members of a political social group when they have little or nothing in common beyond being targets.”); Orellana-Monson, 685 F.3d at 521-522 (“The gangs target a wide swath of society, and we have no evidence before us that they target young men with any particular political orientation, interests, lifestyle, or any other identifying factors.”) (citation omitted); In re Sanchez & Escobar, 19 I. & N. Dec. 276, 286 (B.I.A. 1985) (declining to find a particular social group where “the resulting risk of persecution is not limited to young urban males but equally affects all segments of the rural and urban populations of El Salvador”), aff’d sub nom. Sanchez-Trujillo v. INS, 801 F.2d 1571 (9th Cir. 1986).

Moreover, even the courts that have not yet deferred to the “social visibility” criteria nevertheless defer to the Board’s prior precedents, and no court has accepted a gang-recruitment social group. See, e.g., Gatimi, 578 F.3d at 616 (expressing “no quarrel with” the view that claims such as petitioner’s should ultimately fail); Bueso-Avila, 663 F.3d at 938 (noting that attempted gang recruitment is not a protected ground under the INA).

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.
Respectfully submitted.

DONALD B. VERRILLI, JR.
Solicitor General

STUART F. DELERY
*Acting Assistant Attorney
General*

DONALD E. KEENER
CAROL FEDERIGHI
Attorneys

AUGUST 2012